The Kozloff Years

By Kim Bower-Spence

The average president of a public college or university is a 56-year-old white male who has been leading his institution for less than seven years, according to the College and University Professional Association for Human Resources. As she moves toward her 11th anniversary, BU's 16th president is anything but "average."

When Jessica Sledge Kozloff arrived at Bloomsburg University 10 years ago, she found a campus that resonated with her own values.

The Bloomsburg University president had always been student-focused, with much of her research and writing centered on how to fully integrate the undergraduate student experience. Bloomsburg University offered just the college tradition she was seeking: an enrollment made up mostly of students ages 18 to 23, and a faculty that valued teaching and nurturing students.

"I never had the feeling that I was riding in here like a savior to grab us out of the jaws of disaster," says Kozloff, previously vice president for academic and student affairs for the State Colleges of Colorado. "I came to a place that was already very good. What really excited me was that the faculty and staff wanted to make it even better."

Challenges to opportunities

In her first convocation speech, in August 1994, the president outlined challenges she believed Bloomsburg needed to mold into opportunities, challenges that remain in focus today.

Finances. In 1994, the university depended on state appropriations for 60 percent of its budget; now it receives just 40 percent. Always struggling with state funding, the university mounted its first comprehensive capital campaign in 1998. Officials initially thought they might collect $8 million; eventually, $17 million flowed from private sources.

Effective, efficient management also kept the university humming while other institutions experienced faculty and staff cuts, particularly in the last three years. "We have lived through significant fiscal challenges since 9/11," Kozloff says. "Through the economic fallout, the university managed to persevere and continue investment."

Although enrollment dropped in the early 1990s, it rebounded and helped resuscitate revenues, Kozloff says. "Now we get around 7,500 applicants for 1,300 positions."

"We also have dramatically increased the number of grants that our faculty get," Kozloff adds. That enables labs to

- Doctorate of clinical audiology. Bloomsburg's first doctoral program saved one of the nation's best graduate programs in audiology, the president says. Jointly delivered under the auspices of Indiana University of Pennsylvania, the only university in the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education authorized to grant doctorates, the program resides solely at Bloomsburg.

"It gives another of those signals that we have faculty and facilities that meet the very highest standards," Kozloff says

- The College of Business's recent accreditation by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. "We've proven through a rigorous external validation process that we are among the best," she says. "And, of course, for our students and our alumni, the value of their business degree has just increased exponentially. It will also be a wonderful recruitment tool."

be stocked with scientific equipment and materials BU couldn't otherwise fund.

Meeting society's needs. When Kozloff came to BU, the public did not see higher education as an entity that contributed solutions to society's most vexing problems. Kozloff wanted to change that image, defining Bloomsburg as an institution that invests in programs the state and community deem valuable.

She points to several accomplishments:

- The College of Science and Technology. "One of the major challenges for higher education and our economy in general, is the poor showing of our high school and college graduates in math and science," Kozloff says. "Higher education needs to address this issue."

To focus efforts on math and science, the university created the College of Science and Technology, formerly part of the 22-department College of Arts and Sciences.

"It's difficult for students to do well in this economy, regardless of their specific job, if they don't have basic math skills. Meaningful jobs require the kind of analytical reasoning one learns in the sciences," Kozloff says.

Faculty in BU's teacher education program work closely with math and science faculty to train tomorrow's educators in these fields. "We have a great opportunity to help prepare the teachers who will help students, especially in the elementary grades, develop a comfort level and even a love for math and science."

Improving the undergraduate experience. Kozloff's own graduate studies in political science included environmental planning and how one's surroundings impact the sense of place and community. So it's no coincidence the last 10 years have seen more new construction and renovation than any other 10-year period in university history. "What we have done to the physical infrastructure is nothing short of astonishing," the president says, citing a "laser beam focus" on improving the teaching and learning experience.

Kozloff points to transformation of the old library to the Student Services Center. "That building to me is symbolic of so many things," she says.

This one-stop shop for academic advising, registration, financial aid and tutoring focuses on student needs. And the university accomplished the $4 million-plus task without state funding, relying instead on its capital campaign and $2 million trimmed from its operating budget.

Students also live in new, safer residence halls, and can choose to live in learning communities of like-minded peers. They can study in a new Andrus Library and work out in a new Student Rec Center. What was a dark, gloomy dining facility in Scranton Commons now welcomes students and faculty to a bright, airy space.

The university added muscle to the new College of Science and Technology with an addition to Hartline Building. "You have to give the faculty the kind of facility they deserve," reasons Kozloff, who before coming to Bloomsburg taught college courses in addition to her administrative duties.

Citizen students

Inviting, practical buildings and the best programming foster a student culture centered on moral and intellectual development, Kozloff believes. Her interest in the "whole student" explains her passion for another recent project.

In spring 2004, she took a sabbatical to serve as a presidential consultant to the American Democracy Project of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. The project involves 166 campuses united in finding ways to ignite student interest in civic involvement.

"I'm very concerned about the issue of the responsibilities of citizenship, the growing withdrawal of Americans from the political process, the polarization of our country and the lack of 'civil discourse' in elections and even in discussions among people about important policy issues in our country," says this political scientist. "We have a responsibility to provide experiences that help our students become engaged citizens, to be informed voters, to care about their communities."

The American Democracy Project promotes character development and critical thinking, she believes. She notes that BU students are already civically involved, citing tens of thousands of hours of community service performed each year.

She's particularly proud of the Community Government Association's acquisition and demolition of the former Sesame Street Apartments. CGA-owned Honeysuckle Apartments will open for fall 2005 on the same site.

"The safety of off-campus housing remains one of our primary concerns," says Kozloff, remembering students who have perished in off-campus fires during her tenure. "Our student government association stepped in and bought an eyesore and problem area in the community. The CGA project really raises the bar for off-campus housing."

Beyond Bloomsburg

As president, Kozloff has represented Bloomsburg University far beyond Pennsylvania's borders. Any national honor or appointment recognizes the university as well as her, she emphasizes.

Kozloff currently serves as a commissioner of the Middle States Association Commission on Higher Education, the accrediting body for several states in the Northeast. And she is a member of the board of directors of the American Association of Colleges and Universities, a Washington-based organization that represents more than 400 colleges and universities.

She attributes her appointment to two terms on the Division II Presidents Council of the National Collegiate Athletic Association to Bloomsburg's reputation as one of the best programs in the division. "Not just because we win," she quickly adds. "We're known as a place that really models the Division II philosophy that athletics is another dimension of student development. Our athletes are students first, athletes second." She helped guide reforms to NCAA's organization and policies to redefine the role of intercollegiate athletics.

The Kozloff Years

Just last August at the Russian Finance Academy in Moscow, as she handed diplomas to exchange students who studied in Bloomsburg, she accepted her own honorary doctorate. She's also traveled to Israel, China, Hungary, Mexico, Italy and Austria on educational missions. "I've had so many opportunities as president of this university. I feel an ethical responsibility to give back as much as I can."

Looking ahead

"I see the university in a position to really again enrich, enhance who we are. And we're in a position where we can start making strategic investments in a number of areas," Kozloff relates. That includes selectively adding new academic programs, more professional development for faculty and staff, plus more renovation and construction.

Kozloff stresses that she never intended to use her presidency at Bloomsburg as a stepping stone to another position. "I always had the desire to make my first university presidency my last one. I don't believe any organization can continue to improve unless it has a sense of continuity. That's one of the most important responsibilities of leadership: to provide a stable vision."

When retirement comes, she wants to know she left the university an even stronger place than she found it. "The real job of an administrator is to create an atmosphere where faculty can do their work," she continues. "There are still opportunities to improve the quality of the educational experience at BU. I can't think of a better place or a better group of people to enlist in this important endeavor."

Way to go Mandy! We are all so proud of you.

You have achieved your goals in the past four years; just like we knew you would.

We know you will do well
wherever you may go.

Good luck, love, and success.

Love,
Mom & Dad

Lynn M. Renner

It's been four years since we waved good-bye to you outside of Lycoming Hall. It was sad saying good-bye to our "kid" that day.
We knew as a child, you were gone, but now, four years later, look at you!

You have taken those years and molded yourself into a bright vibrant young woman armed with the confidence that knowledge brings- ready to do whatever you want to.

We are so proud of your accomplishments at Bloomsburg.

You have surpassed all our expectations and then some.

Congratulations Lynn!

Love,
Mom & Dad

Kristen M. Dunn

Your entire family is so very proud of you.
Your hard work and determination have brought you great success at school and will carry you on as you enter the "real world."

Your career choice was a given.
With your drive to succeed you would have excelled in any occupation, but teaching was a natural choice.

Kristen, good luck in all your future endeavors, the world is yours!

We love you!

Mom, Dad & Kyle

Sharla Partlon

You are a champion and you had the best four years at Bloom! We are so very proud of what you have accomplished- your athletic accomplishments in helping to lead the Huskies to 3 NCAA championship field hockey titles and your academic accomplishments in maintaining a 3.60 average or better and being recognized as a scholar athlete. We know you will make a fine math teacher. You have given us so much joy and it is amazing to see our baby blossom into an accomplished young woman. Our family love will always be with you wherever you go. In our family of 5, we now have 4 BU alumni. Yeah, BU!

Stephanie Ann Murray

Congratulations Stephanie!

Your 3 years and determination and hard work brought you to 2005 graduation. The entire family and your friends are beyond "proud" of you! You are an exceptional young lady with a very bright future. I am so very lucky and proud that you are my daughter.

I love you,
Mom

To God be the glory for the great things he has done for you.

We are so proud and blessed to have you in our family, and to see how God has blessed you. We love you! Always remember what Proverbs 3:5 says. "In all ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy path."

Love always,
Mom, Mom-Mom, Pop-Pop, Aunt Sonya, Earl, Neil, Uncle Champ, Aunt Tracey, Alexis, Kirk III & Tamara

James J. Kofskie Jr.

To our James,

Congratulations on your big day!
The time has gone by so quickly, and we are so proud of all you have accomplished.
Best wishes for a great future to our wonderful son and brother.

Love,
Mom & Dad, Melanie & Stephen

She's a butterfly, pretty as the crimson sky
Nothing's ever gonna bring her down
And everywhere she goes
Everybody knows she's so glad to be alive
She's a butterfly

Like the purest light in a darkened world
So much hope inside such a lovely girl
You should see her fly, it's almost magical
It makes you wanna cry, she's so beautiful

God bless the butterfly,
give her the strength to fly
Never let her wings touch
the ground (Martina McBride)

Congratulations Kate
We are so proud of you.

Mind Set

You set a goal for yourself.
You have made it come true
You have worked long and hard.
You did it not only for you.

You love being with kids.
You see what they know.
Now, with your patience and knowledge,
you will help them to aspire and grow.

You did it, our daughter, sister, and wife, with prayer from your mom, dad, sister, brother-in-law, niece,
husband, and son.
A teacher- you have only just begun!

We are all proud of you
Love,
Your Family

To my Family,

I could not have done without all of your help; especially my husband Mike and son Damian!
Thank you God for my whole family!

I love all of you too!
Lenore

Ry,

Eagles we are not, but we can still fly.
Our imaginations become our wings.
The magnificent eagle is still just an eagle,
but we can soar as high and as far as our aspirations take us.
I am so proud of you. Keep up the Eagle's spirit; you have been one for 22 years.

My unconditional love,

Mom

Angie A. Okaily

To our Daughter Angie "sookar:"

Faith helped you succeed and can take you to a bright future. God has blessed you with strength and the ability to shine brightly in his world.

May God continue to bless you with all the good things you deserve. Congratulations!

Love,

Mom & Dad

Dear Sister:

You should be very proud of yourself and of all you have accomplished. You are someone who deserves the good things that happen... and I have a feeling that there are a lot of more good things in store for you. Congratulations! Hey, the sky is the limit.

WAGDY

To our granddaughter Angie:

It takes a lot of planning and a lot of hard work too, it takes a lot of persistence-dedication to make a dream come true. And now that you have achieved this goal, may you go on from here to more success and happiness with every coming year. Congratulations Angie!

Marc Angelo Deluca

Marc it seems like only yesterday you walked through the door of your dorm. Now as the doors close at Bloomsburg and you have reached your goal of graduation you can be very proud. Bring that wonderful wide grin smile of yours to your new adventures in life. We are so proud of you and you are the sunshine of my life!

Love,
Mommy, Jodi & Terese

Josef Tucholski

Josef,

Your perseverance, hardwork and determination have awarded you a significant milestone in your life. You've made your family extremely proud!

May you always have success to make you proud, challenges to keep you strong and enough of life's treasures to keep you happy.

Congratulations on your college graduation!

Love you always,
Mom, Dad & Ray (Tucholski)

Kristin Leigh Gabriel

Dear Kristin,

The day that brought you into our lives has always been a source of special memories. We look back fondly on all of those memories, and we want you to know that those memories grow more precious every year-partly because our "little girl" is all grown up now but mostly because of the remarkable young woman you've grown up to be!

We are so very proud of you and we congratulate you on all of your achievements at BU. We thank you so much for giving us the chance to watch you perform with the competition dance team - it has truly been a wonderful experience.

Best wishes to you as you begin the next chapter of your life-your teaching career!

Love always,

Mom and Dad
